

19th International Symposium of Adapted Physical Activity

Tariq Alsalhe

Tariq Alsalhe is assistant professor in Adapted Physical Education\Activity and director of the Community Service and Training Center in the College of Sport Science and Physical Activity in Saudi Arabia. Alsalhe received his first master's degree in adapted physical education from the University of Wisconsin-La Crosse in 2007, and the second master's degree was in special education from Texas Woman's University in 2010; Tariq also received his PhD degree in adapted physical education from Texas Woman's University in 2011. Dr. Alsalhe is originally from Saudi Arabia and now he is developing "5 Years Plan" for including students with moderate disabilities in the general PE classes in the public schools in Saudi Arabia.

His research interests include: Implementation of Inclusion concept in public schools in Saudi Arabia and Middle East; attitudes of teachers, students, and the community toward the inclusion; Disabled Sports; and services and rights of individuals with disabilities in Middle East.

More information is available at <http://faculty.ksu.edu.sa/25412/Pages/cv.aspx>